Manhattan House unveiled a residence designed by James Huniford last Wednesday featuring works by artists from Creative Growth and White Columns. Creative Growth Art Center serves artists with developmental and physical disabilities and White Columns is a not-for-profit gallery that has supported artists for four decades. To celebrate the new signature residence, Manhattan House held a cocktail reception with over 100 attendees. Guests enjoyed hors d'oeuvres from Betel while viewing work by Dan Miller, Dwight Mackintosh, and Judith Scot that was available for purchase.
