Best place of the week: Family-friendly three bedroom

PIETER ESTERSOHN

Have you given up on the idea of a family home in New York City?

Manhattan House, at 200 E. 66th St., would like to give you renewed hope. The units are being re-engineered with new floor plans.

One example of the possibilities: a three-bedroom listed for $6.1 million with Corcoran that has been decorated by designer James Huniford. It's a whopping 3,200 square feet because it was created out of two apartments: what used to be a three-bedroom and a two-bedroom. It has southern and northern exposures all day, and cross ventilation.

The block-long multi-towered complex has intense amenities: a residents-only spa, a fitness center and yoga studio, a children's playroom and parking with valet.
